Thematic guide: family studies (using qualitative data)

Describe the experience of modern family living
Introduction

The study of the family in sociology progressed considerably in the latter part of the twentieth century.

Rapid changes in economic, political and cultural spheres played a significant role in the reshaping of family units and individual relationships within them.

In Britain there have been significant shifts with regards to household and family formation and dissolution, generating patterns that were quite unimaginable forty or fifty years ago.

Classic collections such as Thompson and Lummis' Family Life and Work Experience Before 1918, 1870-1973 offer a fascinating historical insight into family life for the Edwardians.

More recent studies such as Backett-Milburn's Work and Family Lives, 2002-2009, break down the once rigid boundaries between different branches of sociology (such as family and work) and attempt to understand and describe the experience of modern family living.

The UK Data Service catalogue can be searched for data on family studies using subject terms such as:

- adultery
- life histories
- divorce
- marriage
- family life
- parents
- household
- relationships

Every data collection is accompanied by comprehensive documentation. These are open access and available to the public from the website and it is not necessary to be a registered user to access and download them.

The content of the documentation varies by collection, but usually includes information such as the initial proposal, interview schedule, description of methodology, end of award report, and so on.

In some cases, more details are provided, such as the coding schemes of the original researchers or examples of the consent forms used.

Summary of selected qualitative studies on family studies

Study name
Jarvis, H.
This project focused on three overlapping spheres of restructuring in family life: those operating in labour markets, urban housing markets, and gender relations. The project explored the way 'two wage' families draw on local labour, housing, transport, and childcare solutions to cope with everyday life. Other issues explored were varying prosperity and growth, family structure, social dislocation, home and work dislocation.

Coverage
Sample: two-parent families with young children and at least one economically active partner, resident in Great Britain or the USA between 1996 and 2001
Data: 85 interviews

Topics
- household
- employment
- childcare
- housing
- relationships
- social networks
- transport

Study name
SN 5028 Quality of Home Experience for Homeworkers, 2002
Moore, J.
This study examined the ways in which home is conceptualised, experienced and evaluated by homeworkers, a hard-to-reach group. It explored the impact of home working on the experience of home and family life and sought to identify ways in which working from home may challenge the traditional stereotypical view of home.
Coverage
Sample: homeworkers: worked more than 20 hours, did not live alone, resident in the North of England and South Wales
Data: 45 qualitative interviewees, 15 focus group interviewees, 62 quantitative respondents

Topics
• homeworking
• home life
• leisure time activities
• local neighbourhood

Study name
SN 2000 Family Life and Work Experience Before 1918, 1870-1973
Thompson, P. and Lummis, T.
The major part of this collection comprises life story interviews originally collected as part of the study The Edwardians: Family Life and Work Experience Before 1918. The interviews were undertaken in the early 1970s and formed the basis of the first national oral history project in the United Kingdom.

Coverage
Sample: men and women born between 1870 and 1908
Data: 449 interview transcripts (PDF format) and 444 quantitative cases

Topics
• age
• birth order
• childbirth
• community
• families
• marriage

Study name
Hockey, J.
Making intimacy and the practices of everyday life its core focus, this study asked how women and men manage and subjectively experience the institution of heterosexuality. The study used a life course perspective to investigate the processes through which women and men have identified themselves as 'heterosexual' at various points across the last 80 years.

Coverage
Sample: extended families with three generations of adults aged 15+ based in Northern England
Data: 54 face-to-face interviews
Topics

- sexual knowledge
- courtship
- weddings
- parenthood
- separation and divorce

Study name
SN 4723 Family Life of Old People, 1865-1955.
Townsend, P.
This material formed the basis for Professor Townsend’s classic 1954-1955 study which examined the growing perception that a breakdown in extended family networks was leaving old people isolated, and creating an increasing demand for residential care. The project demonstrated the important role that kinship networks, and relations within the extended family, played in the maintenance of community membership.

Coverage
Sample: elderly men and women in Bethnal Green, Hampstead and Westminster, London
Data: 189 interviews, diaries (in PDF format)

Topics

- old age
- family life
- welfare services
- community life
- retirement
- poverty
- social isolation

Study name
SN 5100 Transition out of the Parental Home in Britain, Spain and Norway, 2001-2002
Hollway, W.
There is considerable diversity in young people’s experiences of leaving home throughout Europe, with young people leaving home at much older ages in the south rather than the north. This research project explored the relative importance of factors such as access to higher education, labour and housing market conditions and culturally-defined norms on leaving home in three European countries: Britain, Spain and Norway.

Coverage
Sample: young people and their parents in Liverpool, Bilbao and Trondheim
Data: Interviews - Liverpool: 34, Bilbao: 34, Trondheim: 24

Topics

- domestic responsibility
• family life
• leaving home
• parents
• siblings
