6 Output classifications

Introduction

6.1 Classifications are used to summarise the diverse range of responses to questions in the Census. This enables efficient statistical processing of data, and facilitates meaningful statistical analysis. Classifications are used in output in a number of ways. Categories within classifications can be combined to reduce the level of detail provided; information can be provided on specific categories of interest; and information from separate classifications can be combined to create new derived variables which provide a different view of the data.

6.2 This section describes the output classifications for questions in the 2001 Census, listing all possible categories within each classification. Derived variables that will be commonly used have also been described.

6.3 Additional derived variables can be commissioned from the census offices as part of a commissioned table request. These new variables will be added to the National Statistics website as they become available.

6.4 To provide customers with a better understanding of the statistical content of the 2001 Census, information is provided on Differences between parts of the UK at 6.8.

6.5 Data classifications at 6.11 provide illustrations of the relevant Census questions, for people and their accommodation.

Mnemonics

6.6 The data classifications should be used when specifying new tables. For convenience, each classification has been given a mnemonic, for example, AGEPUK. These mnemonics are a shorthand method of describing Census classifications when specifying output requirements.

6.7 Whilst the first few characters of the mnemonic are linked to the classification name, the last few characters of the mnemonic indicate whether the classification is describing characteristics of a person (P), family (FAM), household/ household space (H) or communal establishment (C) and whether a classification is applicable to the whole of the United Kingdom (UK) or only to England and Wales (EW), Wales

(W), Scotland (S) or Northern Ireland (NI), or a combination (for example, EWS means England, Wales and Scotland). Thus AGEPUK relates to the age breakdown for persons in the UK.

Differences between parts of the UK

6.8 The programme for selecting topics and developing questions for the 2001 Census was co-ordinated between the Office for National Statistics (England and Wales), the General Register Office for Scotland and the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency. Consideration was given to the public acceptability of topics, whether the questions would provide good quality data, the availability of alternative sources and the burden on the public. The final content balances essential needs with what was reasonable to ask the public. Whilst the objective was to ask the same questions across the United Kingdom, there were a number of differences resulting from the need to cater for specific customer requirements.

These differences have had an effect on the classifications and outputs available for each part of the UK.

6.9 Household questions

- Number of floors. This question was asked in Northern Ireland only.
- Landlord. This question was the same for all parts of the UK, except that the response categories used local terminology. However, this has not affected the ability to produce comparable output at the UK level.
- Furnished/Unfurnished rented accommodation. This question was asked in Scotland only.

6.10 Person questions

- Country of birth. Response categories were listed in a different order for each part of the UK.
- Ethnic group. There were significant differences in the question in England and Wales, in Scotland and in Northern Ireland, resulting in separate output classifications.

- Religion. There were differences in the questions asked in England and Wales, in Scotland and in Northern Ireland, resulting in separate output classifications. There were two questions in Scotland and Northern Ireland (current religion and religion of upbringing), but only one in England and Wales.
- Language. There were specific questions on Celtic languages asked in Wales (Welsh), Scotland (Gaelic) and Northern Ireland (Irish). England had no such question on Celtic language.
- Qualifications. There were differences in the question in England and Wales, in Scotland and in Northern Ireland to reflect local requirements. In England and Wales there was an additional question asking for information on teaching, medical, nursing and dental professional qualifications. There was less of a requirement for such information in Scotland and Northern Ireland. Consequently, in Scotland there was one tick-box response category asking if people had 'professional qualifications (for example, teaching, accountancy)'. In Northern Ireland, there was no question asking for information on professional qualifications.
- Travel destination. In England, Wales and Northern Ireland the travel destination question referred only to place of work and was asked of people aged 16 – 74 in a job the week before Census. In Scotland, the travel destination question was asked of all people and related to the address travelled to for the main job or course of study (including school).
- Method of travel. In England, Wales and Northern Ireland the question on method of travel related to the journey to the main place of work. In Scotland, the question related to travel to the main place of work or study. There were minor differences in the response categories across countries.

Data classifications

6.11 In the following sections, where a variable is taken directly from a question on the Census form, that question is included in the text. If the wording is the same throughout the UK, only the English version (that is with the English question number indicated) is shown. The question used in the rest of the UK is only shown where the wording is different.

Scotland

33 What is (was) the business of the organisation which you named above at Question 32?

◆ For example, MAKING SHOES, REPAIRING CARS, SECONDARY EDUCATION.

◆ Civil Servants, Local Government Officers - please specify your Department.

This question asks for a description of the business, or main activity of each person's employer. The variable uses a Census modified version of the UK Standard Industrial Classification of Economic Activities 1992 – UK SIC (92) classification.

For the 2001 Census, industry descriptions given to the question above are automatically coded using the modified SIC(92) classification. Where possible, output is at the detailed 4-digit level. However, in many cases, insufficient information is given by the public when completing this question. For example, insufficient responses provided by the form-filler relating to the construction industry has meant releasing output at the 2-digit level only. This has resulted in a need to produce a modified output classification that is a mixture of 2, 3 and 4-digit industry codes. The classification below provides output similar to that of the 1991 Census. In standard output, the most detailed classification is at section level, A to Q.

Applicability: All people aged 16 – 74 years working in the week before Census and all people aged 16 – 64 years who were not working in the week before Census but who last worked in 1996 or later, England, Wales and Scotland.

All people aged 16 – 74 years who have ever worked, Northern Ireland

- ◆ For example, PRIMARY SCHOOL TEACHER, CAR MECHANIC, TELEVISION SERVICE ENGINEER, BENEFITS ASSISTANT.
- ◆ Civil Servants, Local Government Officers - give job title not grade or pay band.

31 Describe what you do (did) in your main job.

This variable records the occupation of the person, coded to the new Standard Occupational Classification (SOC2000). The 2001 Census uses the full classification down to unit group level – the lowest of the four levels in the classification.

Applicability: All people aged 16 – 74 years working in the week before Census and all people aged 16 – 64 years who were not working in the week before Census but who last worked in 1996 or later, England, Wales and Scotland.

All people aged 16 – 74 years who have ever worked, Northern Ireland

The different levels in this classification are:

- 1 digit code (e.g. 1) – Major group level, 9 categories
- 2 digit code (e.g. 11) - Sub-major group level, 25 categories
- 3 digit code (e.g. 111) – Minor group level, 81 categories
- 4 digit code (e.g. 1111) – Unit group level, 353 categories

The most detail used in standard output is the sub-major group level.

The sub-major, minor group and unit group structure is defined as follows:
